

TIMOTHY DAILEY '10

Recipient of The Raymond '69 and Judy '71 Smilor Family Endowed Scholarship

Timothy Dailey is a writer. In fact, he's been writing plays and poems since childhood. And as a Catholic, it seemed natural for him to explore both his faith and his love for the written word at St. Edward's. As a junior English Writing and Rhetoric major with an emphasis in Creative Writing, Timothy is furthering his career goal of being a professional playwright and poet.

During his time at St. Edward's, he has participated in the Honor's Program, Sacramental Preparation, and several volunteer activities. All of these experiences have supplemented the social justice education that St. Edward's prides itself on providing students. And Timothy is one of ten people from his family to attend St. Edward's — he joins four aunts, two uncles, one great-uncle, his grandfather, and his mother as part of a family legacy here on the hilltop. "St. Edward's University is a place of contrasts. It is at once formal and informal, proper and friendly. It is a place where ideas are accepted and freely exchanged, while attempting to stay true to the teachings of the Catholic Church. St. Edward's is a place where history meets the present and works together to produce the future of our nation and our world."

Timothy feels that his quality education at St. Edward's is an integral part of his formation as a writer, a Catholic and a person. "This scholarship has helped make one of my most ambitious dreams a reality. Without it, I may not have been able to pursue my goal of graduating from one of the best small universities in the nation."
