FINANCIAL INFORMATION FOR F-1/F-2 VISA APPLICANTS

Under USCIS regulations, any non-U.S. citizen or permanent resident coming to the United States for full-time study, or transferring from one academic institution to another for the purpose of study, must have sufficient funds to meet all anticipated expenses for at least the first year of study. Evidence of additional funding will be required to support accompanying dependents (see Married Student Information).

It is the student's responsibility to present acceptable evidence of adequate financial support before requesting the Form I-20 required for the student visa (see Financial Support Documents). Documentary proof of this support must be presented to the U.S. Consulate overseas when applying for the entry visa. It may be requested by USCIS officers at the U.S. port of entry. A Form I-20 will not be issued until this document is fully completed with required attachments (see Financial Support Documents).

Required Minimum Support

The University's Required Minimum is considered sufficient to support a basic student lifestyle. It does not include expenses for travel, dependents, vacations or items such as automobiles, household furniture and appliances, a computer, etc. A preferred higher standard of living, inflation and emergencies may necessitate that you bring with you more personal funds than the Required Minimum (see Expenses) per academic year.
